Join the world premier of People.Power.Planet!

We are pleased to invite you to the world premiere of the documentary People.Power.Planet., that explores how citizens are shaping responses to the climate crisis in Latin America and beyond.

The film weaves together stories from Chile, Brazil, and Ecuador to show how citizens across diverse contexts are reclaiming democratic space in the face of the climate crisis. Through participatory and direct democratic practices, communities engage in public decision-making, challenge extractive interests, and shape responses to the climate crisis—offering a timely reflection on the role of participation at a moment of democratic and environmental strain.

The screening will be followed by a moderated discussion with Clara Egger, Board Member of Democracy International, and Klara Butz, Campaigner at urgewald. The conversation will provide space for reflection and exchange on the relevance of citizen participation for addressing today's global environmental and governance challenges.

A reception with refreshments will follow the screening and discussion.

We would be honored by your presence and your perspective at this event.
